HMS Ulysses (R69) - Wikipedia

HMS Ulysses was the debut novel by Scottish author Alistair MacLean. Originally published in 1955, it was also released by Fontana Books in 1960. MacLean's experiences in the Royal Navy during World War II provided the background and the Arctic convoys to Murmansk provided the basis for the story, which was written at a publisher's request after he'd won a short story competition the previous year.

HMS Ulysses (novel) - Wikipedia

HMS Ulysses is a light cruiser, a variant on the Dido class, with some features of the later, similar Black Prince class units. She has seen a great deal of action on the northern convoy routes to Murmansk, and is wearing out. Not just the ship's components, but her crew. As MacLean describes them, Ulysses' crew is not the indestructible band ...

Ulysses (1967) - IMDb

HMS Ulysses is, in my humble opinion, the greatest book ever written. I've read more books in my lifetime than I can recall and not one of them has the absolute, heart-rending power of this one. Maclean produced something beyond that of most writers, of most people, in HMS Ulysses he made a story which grips you tightly from the first paragraph ...
